A BULLET THROUGH HER HEART.

A Tragle Midnight Spicide in a Down-Town Hotel.

The guests of the Belvedere Hotel were startled after midnight by the sharp report of a pistol ringing through the corridors. In a moment the interior of the ridors. In a moment the interior of the botel was a scene of confusion, the alarmed guests running to the first floor, the direction from which the shot was heard.

Smoke was found curling out of the deoret a room occupied by Mrs. Fisher, and pushing open the door the occupant of the room was discovered lying on the bed.

A smoking revolver lay beside her, and just over her heart her undergarments were stained with blood. The guests tried everything that could be done to save her, but she died before a physician reached her side.

but she died before a physician reached her side.

A remantle story lies behind the suicide. Last Monday a man, accompanied by the dead woman, registered at the hotel as Mr. and Mrs. D. B. Fisher of Kansas City. The couple remained there until Thursday morning, when her supposed husband went away and did not return. Yesterday the woman hunted up Detective McDevitt and was in his company all day. Just before the shooting occurred Mrs. Fisher called a porter and asked him to unstrap her trunk and went hurriedly and nervously through the contents. Then she requested him to go for an oyster stew. Soon afterward she fired the fatal shot.

The suicide was evidently premeditated, as she had undressed and carefully turned down the covers and had laid down in a natural position. A large trunk, full of beautiful dresses, and several valies were in the room.

beautiful dresses, and several values were in the room.

Detective McDevitt told the story behind the tragedy. The woman's name was Mrs. Mary Fisher of Santa Fe. A man named Daniel Gusdorf, who lives on Seventh street, between N and O streets, met her several years ago, and they became attached to each other, but the came attached to each other, but the parents of Gusdorf opposed their proposed union.

She followed him to this city and most probably killed herself through despair. She was a handsome brunette, with fine features, and about 30 years of age.

The last time that Mrs. Fisher left the hotel was vesterday, when she took a carriage and visited Detective McDevitt, stating that she wished to see what had been done with her case.

After viewing the body Coroner Patterson ordered its removal to Burgdorf's undertaking establishment, an inquest being deemed unnecessary. The woman's friends have been advised of her death, and the remains will be held subject to their advice.

She Beat the Marriage Record and Claims a Fortune. Wilkisbarder, Pa., Jan. 24.—A sensa ional court case, revealing a story which suggests the Eva Mann-Hamilton case, is tonal court case, revealing a story which suggests the Eva Mann-Hamilton case, is exciting a great deal of interest here. On the 27th of Jaly, 1889, J. P. Price, one of the leading citizens of Pittston, died, leaving an estate valued at $30,000. The impression at the time was that Mr. Price was a bachelor.

A short time after his death, however, a woman dressed in deep mourning called at the office of E. A. Martin, in this city, and represented herself as Price's widow. Mr. Martin, who had been granted letters of administration on the estate, refused to believe the woman's story. He said Mr. Price had never been married. The women then said she would take the case into court and prove there that she had not only been married to Price once, but twice. Lawyer Martin snapped his fingers at the woman and said she must be "shiftly off."

"Well, you'll find out whether I am off or not." she said, as she closed the office door behind her with a bang.

Yesterday the case came up for trial in the Orphan's Court. The plaintiff said that her name before marriage was Susan Hauter. She furnished proof that she had been married to Price one time, on January 12, 1870, at Lancaster, Pa., by Rev. M. J. Cohrlin. Miss Hauter was then only 20 years old. She met Price at Harrasburg. After a short courtship Price proposed marriage, which proposal

Rev. M. J. Cohrlin. Miss Hauter was then only 20 years old. She met Price at therrishing. After a short courfship Price proposed marriage, which proposal witness said she accepted after being convinced that Price could give her a good home. The marriage did not prove a happy one, however. After two years Price deserted his young wife. The woman's relatives came to her rescue and Price was hauled into court. A separation was agreed upon, Price agreeing to pay his wife a stipulated sum weekly for her support. A year later a reconciliation followed, and despite the fact that no divorce had been granted, but only a separation, the two married again. But again it was found that they could not agree and another separation ensued.

In 1874 Mrs. Price longed for a companion, and, meeting W. F. Baker, she accepted his attentions. In July of that year they were married. Baker testified to this fact himself. He also swore that he found it impossible to live in peace with the woman and left her. The next heard of her was that she had taken unto herself another husband in the person of Samuel McCard. This marriage took place in August, 1887. Baker now entered a suit for divorce from the woman, which was grunted.

In the meantime Mr. McCard had discovered that he could not live with the weman, and left her. Nothing more was heard of Samu until she appeared in the effect of Attorney Martin and claimed Price's estate.

THE SILVER POOL DRAG NET PAILS

TO CATCH ANYTHING. Who Knew That Silver Pool Certificates Were Being Handed About by Owenby, but Never Knew Anyone Who Bought Them.

The silver pool investigation committee continued its inquiry this morning. Congressman Dorsey of Nebraska was the first witness. He was sworn at his wn request and testified that he knew nothing of the existence of a silver pool A man named Hedenberg, a Chicago real estate dealer (presumably the man whom a witness had accused before the committee of endeavoring to dispose of silver bul-lion certificates to Congressmen duing the pending of the silver legislation), had showed the witness a silver certificate, but had never mentioned anything about disposing of similar certificates to Congres but had never mentioned anything about disposing of similar certificates to Congressmen.

The witness said he had introduced at Hedenberg's request a bill intended to be a panacea for all financial ills. It was while Hedenberg was speaking about the bill that Hedenberg showed him the certificate which represented a thousand onness of silver. Hedenberg said he had a number of the certificates.

E. O. Leech, the director of the mint, testified that the silver bullion in sight on December 1, 1890, was more than eleven and a half millions of ounces, more than half of which was held by the Mercantle Safe Deposit Company of New York, and on January 1, 1891, the amount in sight was 12,439,000 ounces, more than half of this amount being held by the same company. The witness knew nothing of the existence of any silver pool.

When H. V. Parsons of Brooklyn, N. Y., took the stand Mr. Stevens, the correspondent who wrote the articles on which the investigation was founded, asked leave to make a statement. He said that among the names he had given the committee as having been mentioned to him by Mr. Owenby (who gave him the roominition as was that of Mr. Parsons. The witness had received a letter from Owenby staling that he (Mr. Stevens) was in error in giving the name of Mr. Parsons. The witness said he had also received a telegram from Owenby staling that his address was Hotel Richelien, Chicago. Owenby in his letter said he would appear before the committee to engo. Owenby in his letter said na would appear before the committee to would appear before the committee to testify.

Mr. Parsons said he was an arout for Wells, Fargo & Co. His firm sold affer every day, but he had no knowledge of any pool nor of the connection of any Senators, Representatives or Government officials with the purchase of silver. In answer to questions the witness said that, in his opinion, between $,000,000 or 10,000,000 of dollars worth of silver was held in New York. He believed that about 5,000,000 of the amount of silver held in New York was in the hands of trust companies; the rest of the amount was in the hands of banking houses. Owenby had told the witness that he had an interest in silver. Ogenby told him about a deal he was in, but he did not say anything about members of Congress being in it.

siyer. Ogenby told him about a deal he was in, but he did not say anything about members of Congress being in it.

J. B. Macartney, of the banking firm of Carson & Macartney of Washington, said his firm had not sold any silver or silver certificates to any members of Congress while the silver legislation was pending. He gave it as his opinion that no silver peol existed outside of the newspapers.

When Mr. Macariney had finished his testimony, Chairman Dingley said that he wished to correct a starement published in several newspapers that the Committee knew in advance the statement that Scintor Vest would make, and adjourned from Saturday until Weinesday to avoid its being made until Senator Cameron had been re-elected. No member of the committee, he said, had any knowledge whatever as to what Senator Vest wished to say. Senator Vest had written the committee requesting to be allowed to make a statement on Saturday. The committees mittee requesting to be allowed to make a statement on Saturday. The committee replied that he could be heard as requested, and had met on Saturday to hear him. On that day Senatar Vest sent them word that owing to the state of affairs in the Senate he could not appear, and stated that he would appear later. The committee, having no other witnesses to examine, adjourned until Wednesslay at the request of Mr. Cates, who had some business to attend to that would prevent his attendance until that day. He made this statement, he said, in justice to the committee, as such statements as the one published did them an injustice and the committee, as such statements as the one nublished did them an injustice and the country an injury.

The committee adjourned until Monday evening.

The carstarted from the office in Anacostia at 2 o'clock and arrived at the terminus a half hour afterward. The new road will open for travel on Monday, and the intention of the company is to run two-horse cars of convenient size at short intervals. These cars are of modern construction. As soon as electric motors are made a commercial success the company intends to alopt them. A new car house has been put up at Anacostia, and all new cars will be built there. The road is well constructed, having been laid by the company itself, under the supervision of James F. Halley.

The construction of the road will be continued until Anacostia and Southeast Washington residents will have easy access to the business parts of the city.

The Eckerson family restored Annie to consciousness and took her home. On arriving there they were horrified to find that Mrs. Ackerman had dropped dead from heart di case, due to the excitement resulting from the mysterious disappearance of Annie, who was much thought of by the family. There is no clue to the men who attacked the girl. It is thought that they attempted to chloroform her.

Possibly their object was to hide her, trusting that the Ackerman family would go in search of her, and then they could rob the house. In fact the Ackermans spent the time in searching the well, fearing that the girl had fallen in.

The Scotch strikers are much encouraged by the result of last night's division of Mr. Channing's motion to censure the railway companies; for this is what it amounted to. The government opposed the metion, but it came within seventeen votes of being carried, a closer margin than the government has encountered since it risked defeat on the Public House Endowment bill. While it is true that many strikers have gone back to work, the majority are still out and the fight is not yet chade.

The Chillan Legation in London to-day acknowledged that there was a revolution in progress, and while productive rejerved, the first socretary exhibited a feverish nervousness, which showed considerable apprehension as to the result. The rebel demands are that Congress be immediately convened, the present Ministry dismissed and free elections held.

Advices from Brassels state that the press of that city dare not publish the current rumors concerning Prince Baudonin's death. It is said that he looked forward with dread to his proposed marriage to his cousin, Princess elementine, and that no affection beyond their near relationship existed between them. The weight of public opinion still is that his death was not entirely naturas.

The Chroside says it has high authority for the statement that no pressure has been brought to bear on Canada by the Government in connection with pending negotiations between the Provinces and the United States. The Chronicle constinues by saying that while it would rejoice to see Canada and the United States commercial friends thus inducing a different spirit from that engendered by the thorny fishing disputes, it does not desire to depart from the policy of allowing the Colonies a free hand in commercial matters. The article concludes as follows: "Nor is it rain to imply any intention on the part of Canada to make a reciprocal commercial agreement the basis of settlement of such questions as those involved in the Bering Sea matter, which must be decided on their merits."
